ROLES OF HEIS IN PERSPECTIVE OF NEP 2020

BROCHURE

About the programme

Although India's higher education system is one of the world's largest, it faces numerous challenges, including quality of teaching and learning, lower graduate employability, public-private partnerships, entry of foreign institutions of higher learning, increasing research capacity and funding, poor governance and complex regulatory processes etc. Despite significant efforts over the past two decades, to meet growing demands in higher education, newer challenges continue to emerge, often because of the actions of an increasingly informed and demanding population. The national education policy (nep 2020) takes a comprehensive look at these challenges to higher education system in India and provides a roadmap for meeting the challenges including creating an ecosystem for improving quality of teaching, learning and research.

Objectives

This programme has been designed to familiarize participants with challenges and changes in higher education in India as brought out in NEP 2020, with particular reference to the teaching and learning methodology, research promotion, institutional governance issues and, most importantly, the manner in which these impact the development of faculty.

In a country like India online courses such as MOOCs are gradually becoming popular. The University Grants Commission (UGC) with a view to promoting CBCS as well as Credit Transfer has proposed 20% course delivery through MOOCs in Indian higher education. The UGC's move was to introduce a system of education that would help in bringing parity of Indian higher education with Western or European higher education systems. This programme will try to imply how the Indian MOOCs should be used in providing learning opportunities.
