ABSTRACT:

Among the important pulse-yielding plants Vigna radiata is important. In the Indian subcontinent, it is an essential source of dietary protein particularly in the vegetarian population. It contains abundant nutrients with biological activities. Soaked seeds are eaten as a good source of protein and mature seeds are cooked or can be sprouted for human consumption. Mung beans and its sprouts contain chemical constituents like flavonoids, phenolic acids, organic acids, amino acids, carbohydrates, and lipids. It is related to different biological activities like antioxidant, antimicrobial, antitumor, anti-inflammatory, anti-diabetic, and

ABSTRACT:

The information regarding the DNA sequences of plant is very limited. When knowledge of the DNA sequence of the targeted genome is unavailable several PCR based techniques (RAPD, ITS, AFLP, SSR markers, SNP markers) are utilized to accumulate information about the genetic adaptability. Random Amplification of Polymorphic DNA is a technique by which the random segments of DNA are amplified. Short nucleotide primers (8–12 nucleotides) are used to proceed with the PCR using genomic DNA, for fragments to amplify. The primers bind somewhere in the sequence. By comparing the banding matrix the DNA patterns can be ascertained. RAPD has been utilized to characterize, trace the phylogeny of diverse plant species. Internal transcribed spacer (ITS) is to a non-functional RNA situated between structural ribosomal RNAs (rRNA) on a transcript. The sequence of rRNA precursor transcript is the 5' external transcribed sequence (5' ETS), 18S rRNA, ITS1, 5.8S rRNA, ITS2, 28S rRNA and the 3'ETS read from 5' to 3' direction. The complete sequence repeats themselves in tandem array for thousands of copies separated by regions of non-transcribed DNA termed non-transcribed spacer (NTS) or intergenic spacer (IGS). There is the presence of two ITS regions in eukaryotes. The first one located between 18S and 5.8S rRNA genes is called ITS1, while the next in the sequence is ITS2 that lies between 5.8S and 26S rRNA genes in plants. Each eukaryotic ribosomal cluster follows the sequence of the 5' external transcribed sequence (5' ETS), trailed by the 18S rRNA gene, the ITS1 and the 5.8S rRNA gene, the ITS2, the 28S rRNA gene, and finally the 3' ETS. ETS and ITS pieces are excised and rapidly degraded during rRNA maturation. In our study four different gilled mushrooms were analyzed for RAPD and ITS study.

KEYWORDS: Mushroom, RAPD, DNA, PDB, ITS, Blast.

INTRODUCTION:

Mushroom has been introduced as an important food supplement in human diet for many years. Many scientific works have been conducted to characterize various aspects of mushroom.

It was already established that the antioxidant activity of edible mushroom assists on the adverse effect of reactive oxygen species<sup>1</sup>. The mode of action of antimicrobial substances of mushroom was already reported<sup>2</sup>. The beneficial biological activities of various chemical compounds isolated from Agaricus bisporus were well elucidated<sup>3</sup>.

A search of actinomycetes producing newer metabolites for antifungals against Candida albicans was inspected and reported<sup>4</sup>. The of antimicrobial potentiality and detoxification ability of Pleurotus ostreatus on the fungus Fusarium sporotrichioides were well studied<sup>5</sup>. Experiments to identify a rich producer of omega-3 fatty acid from various filamentous fungi were conducted<sup>6</sup>. The medicinal property of protein extracted from Oyster and button mushroom were investigated<sup>7</sup>. The extracts of Agaricus bisporus, famous as a source of many important chemicals had been proved to be protective role against several other pathogenic microbes<sup>8</sup>.

In spite of various reports and investigations, the genetic information regarding lower plants is very insufficient. Various groups of scientists are working to improve the DNA database of fungi.

Emergence of the Virtual: Is it the Future of Theatre in Post-Covid World?

Swati Roy Chowdhury

Abstract

The present paper attempts to study the global rise of Virtual theatre during the post-Covid era with special emphasis on the reasons behind such emergence, various ways in which Virtual theatres are operating both globally and nationally, and variety of responses such a surfacing has generated, thereby trying to figure out whether such a form of theatre can actually someday act as a proper replacement of the more popular form of live theatre.

While for centuries, theatre professionals have marvelled at this medium "being real" compared to television and cinema, they have now begun to acknowledge that the digital space and the traditional stage must coexist. (Nag, Arundhati. In Shruithi HM Sastry, n.pag)

The discovery of the Novel Corona virus (or Covid-19) in China's Wuhan can be deemed as the most influential event that mankind has experienced in over a period of two centuries. The virus, which

H1N1 SWINE FLU PANDEMIC 2009: SPREAD AND EFFECT ON HUMANS

ABSTRACT: Not all infectious organisms are spread equally, so different diseases are classified under various scientific terms, such as 'epidemic' and 'pandemic'. It is seen that the terms are often interchanged mistakenly. An 'epidemic' is a disease which affects a large number of people within a community or region. On the other hand, a 'pandemic' is an epidemic that spreads over multiple countries or continents. The term 'pandemic' and 'epidemic' are used to describe the rate and distance of the disease not by the severity of the disease. This article highlights every basic detail about the H1N1 Swine Influenza Pandemic of 2009, starting from the genetic material of the virus to statistical representation of the pandemic, and finally discussing about the social conditions during and before the pandemic.

Women and Education Across the World and Economy

Abhilasha Bhattacharya
6th Semester

If you educate a man, you educate an individual. But if you educate a woman, you educate a nation. — African Proverb

Introduction

An irony in the study of gender differences is the remarkable increase in women's levels of higher education at the same time that gender differences in earnings and employment remain substantial. Still, many of the world's women struggle to obtain minimal levels of education. This expansive subject area includes returns to education, reasons for barriers to girls' education in some nations, how gender gaps in the labor market are responding to relative skill levels, and college majors of women and men.

Evidence across regions in the world reveals patterns in school enrollment ratios and literacy that are divided along gender lines. In the developing world, apart from most countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, enrollment ratios of girls lag behind those for boys at all levels of education. Worldwide literacy rates for adult men far exceed those for women. While educational progress has been enjoyed by both sexes, these advances have failed to eradicate the gender gap. Education enhances labor market productivity and income growth for all, yet educating women has beneficial effects on social well-being not always mirrored by the market. Rising levels of education improve women's productivity in the home which in turn can increase family health, child survival, and the investment in children's human capital.
